Setting up the game

Take all of the picture cards and jokers out of your pack.

Player one and two need to sit facing each other. The judge is to sit next to the players.

Playing the game

Both players draw a card at the same time and place it facing outwards so that the other player can see the card and you can't.

The judge yells the number which is result of the two numbers (on the players' heads) being added together.

The players need to yell out the number that they think is on their head. They do this by making a quick calculation. eg the number the judge yells minus the number the see on their partner's head equals the card on their head.

How to win

After you win a round you keep the cards from both players.

The player at the end of the entire deck with the most cards is the winner.
