

DEVELOPING MUSICAL SKILL

Presented by Michael Griffin

It's a simple connection but a powerful one. The internal drive required to pursue an activity relies heavily on the greatest of all motivators – making progress. For musical progress, nothing is as important as the quality and the quantity of practice time.

A specialist in fostering intrinsic motivation and expert achievement, Michael Griffin, will equip students, teachers and parents with the methods and mindset required to maximise the prospect of learning music enjoyably and successfully.

This inspiring and interactive presentation will focus on concepts including repetition, chunking, slow practice and the core importance of developing a growth mindset.

Michael Griffin is an educator, speaker, author, conductor and pianist. Michael's talks are inspired by theories of motivation and the premise that the greatest predictor of progress – music and otherwise – is the quality and the quantity of learning time. He has consulted for Cambridge University Press and is the author of seven books. His most recent - Learning Strategies for Musical Success - has received universal acclaim.

Michael has presented for 350 schools and conferences in more than 25 countries.

- DATE: Thursday 9 August 2018
- TIME: 7.00 - 8.30pm
- VENUE: East Doncaster Secondary College
Performing Arts Centre
Entry via George Street
Doncaster East, 3109
- TICKETS: $10 per student
$5 per accompanying adult
- BOOKINGS: www.trybooking.com/WGOG

For further information please contact Scott Copeman at EDSC via copeman.scott@eastdonsc.vic.edu.au or (03) 9842 2244.