

As I stood on the pitch, my heart filled up with anxiety. All these thoughts sunk with my gear. That's when my positive mind zoomed in... I was as happy as a monkey with bananas. ~~When~~ The first ball came in, I knew how to play when the bat made contact. It rushed to the boundary like a cheetah running for its prey. ~~The~~ The whole world was shrouded in cheering and celebrations as I ran to the nonstrike. ~~It~~

It was time after I got my 17 runs, my partner told me "this guy is a good bowler, bat straight." After he said that, I still was as confident as a solid block, I knew what to do. I saw that the way he holds it affected how the delivery ~~is~~ ^{was}.

~~The~~ The ~~first~~ first ball came in straight in

I didn't expect it but I remembered
"Bat straight!" I went for a cover drive
I knew to hit the sweet spot so it ^{would} ~~with~~ ~~the~~ give it a boost. It worked! It went skyward and elegantly landed ~~the~~ ~~the~~ next to the boundary making my runs 36!

Well done Ryan,

I love the expressive language you have used. I am very proud of you!

Mr. Cabral

