Young Australians of the Year

Awere Mabil is the recipient of the 2023 Young Australian of the Year Award. The 27-year-old South Australian not only plays for the Socceroos, but is the co-founder of the not-for-profit organisation Barefoot to Boots, which aims for better health, education, policies, and gender equality for refugees.

The State and Territory recipients of the category, which recognises the amazing contributions of 16-30 year-olds, were applauded for their advocacy, athleticism, entrepreneurship, music, community involvement, humanitarianism, and leadership.

25 Fastest Growing Jobs in Australia

What does the future of work look like, and which jobs will be hiring when you finish school?

Through an analysis of 5 years' of user data, LinkedIn has uncovered the 25 fastest-growing jobs in Australia which helps answer these questions.

Their results include the job titles, a description of what the job involves, the industries employing them, gender distribution within the role, the level of education and training required, and the average number of years' experience gained in the workforce before getting these jobs. This is pretty valuable stuff for planning where you want to go, and how to get there!

According to LinkedIn, Australia's top 6 fastest growing jobs are:

- | | | |
|-------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. Technical Program Manager | 2. Clinical Exercise Physiologist | 3. Site Reliability Engineer |
| 4. Sales Development Representative | 5. Platform Engineer | 6. Growth Specialist |
