University of Sydney – Become an Occupational Therapist

Wednesday 19 August. 4.30pm

Occupational therapists are experts in the everyday. We help people overcome barriers that prevent them from doing the activities (occupations) that they want to do or need to do in their everyday lives. These barriers could be caused by disability, injury, health conditions, ageing or other life circumstances or they could be caused by the environments in which people live or work. Occupational therapists come from the perspective of “What matters to you?” not “What’s the matter with you?” We focus on what is most important for each individual, group or community we work with – so this makes a career in occupational therapy challenging, exciting and rewarding. Join us for this webinar and explore where a career in occupational therapy could take you.

University of Sydney – Why study Exercise Physiology or Exercise Science?

Thursday 20 August. 4.00pm

A degree in Exercise Physiology or Exercise Science might sound fun, but where can it take you? How is being an Exercise Physiologist different from being a Physiotherapist? In this masterclass Associate Professor Kate Edwards will clear up some common confusions about studying sport/exercise degrees, and tell you why educating exercise professionals is so important for Australia's future.

Student Life in the Tertiary World

Choosing what to study and where to study is just the tip of the iceberg. Once you have finally made the big decision and turned up for your first day, student life is everything that follows. Your time as a student is a whole lot more than just showing up to class and displaying a diploma on your wall. Rather, it's about the complete picture and what you get out of your experience, including minor ups and downs and the general challenges that come with taking time out to complete post-compulsory education.

How to get Industry Experience While You are Still Studying

It's never too early to start thinking about getting your foot in the door. University can be a tad overwhelming for new students but once you have become settled, it's a good idea to keep an eye out for any workplace opportunities.

Whether it's through an internship, volunteering, work experience or a combination of all three, getting ahead is entirely possible while you're still studying.

Careers In Shipping

The shipping industry plays a vital role in international trade and in the economic progress of most countries. Because of its international involvement and operations, it is different in many respects from other industries. Because of this it offers interesting and diverse career opportunities.

Shipping operates in a keenly competitive international market and as the growth in international trade increases and ships to carry the trade are in greater demand, career prospects also improve.

Employment opportunities arise for bright young people with or without their higher school certificate or university degrees. On-the-job training is available for everyone to learn about the shipping industry. Positions also become available for graduates or those who already have professional qualifications. The shipping industry attracts a wide range of disciplines including accounting, IT, customer service, marketing, logistics and international business. In more specialised sectors of the industry, ship chartering and broking skills are often in demand.
