Short, sharp sessions across the year

Elevate runs sessions in short, sharp, 50-minute workshop-style groups in order to match student attention spans and hone in on a niche skill area.

By spacing out the seminars across the school year, we make sure we are giving students the skills they need at the time they need them.

Young presenters your students can relate to

Elevate workshops are presented by university students who have recently faced and ached high school. Our presenters are energetic, speak the same language as your students, and are currently using the skills themselves - so they become immediately relatable.

Practical skills students can use immediately

There is a lot of advice out there about study skills, and unfortunately a lot of myths that make sense on the surface but are either impractical or simply don't deliver results. Elevate seminars are based on 17 years of ongoing research into the habits and techniques of top students, ensuring students get simple, practical and effective skills that can be used immediately.

More than a one-off

Good study skills aren't built in an hour - they take consistent practice. The Elevate study skills program includes a comprehensive, easy-to-use Teacher Implementation Kit with each workshop. These kits are modular, contain short videos, and can be run in pastoral care lessons or in a subject line.

Engaging workshops in small, class-sized groups

We send out teams of multiple presenters to work with small, class-sized groups. We maximise engagement by tailoring the content to suit each group's needs, making sure each student is getting a targeted message.

Supported with staff and parent workshops

The greatest change in student behaviour occurs when study skills are supported by both staff and parents, with everyone speaking the same language. Elevate runs heavily discounted staff and parent workshops to get all stakeholders on the same page with the program and share best practices for reinforcing these skills in the classroom and at home.
