

5/1/21 Sage

110 kms on highways

In Victoria you can't go over 110 on a highway unless your over taking. But in every other state in Victoria Australia you can go 110.

I don't know why anyone would disagree with this because you just get to ~~your~~ ^{up} ~~your~~ ^{your} destination faster.

2 pg's — Also when your overtaking you can go up to 140-160. Or if people are going 10 or 20 under the speed limit they get a $360 fine, and if you ~~can~~ have a caravan on the back of your car ~~or~~ or anything you can tow on your car, then you can go 120 kms because it's heavier and harder to drive.

2 pg's — When I drove up to Cairns we went on the Bruce highway and that entire time we were on that highway we went 110-120 kms. Or when we were driving to the city in Melbourne we couldn't go 110-120 because we were in VIC. So the only reason ~~this probably~~ reason this is probably not to going to happen anytime soon or maybe it'll never happen at all is because it's more likely for accidents.

So thats why I think that you can go 110 on highways in Victoria, because it's one of the only states in the whole world that can't go 110 on highways legally. 69% of the world can go 110 and 31% can't.

Two Stars and a Wish

Sage

★ ~~Great~~ ^{Powerful} Arguments and reasons

★ Good amount of sentences in your paragraphs

★  Maybe next time ^{you could do} more editing