Learn, Unlearn, Relearn

“Learn, Unlearn, Relearn.”

No, it's not a catchy dance move; it's a powerful concept that can supercharge your journey through life and set you up for a stellar career.

Imagine your brain as a super-flexible rubber band. When you learn something new, it's like stretching that band. But here's the kicker: as you grow, you might find that some of the things you learned no longer apply in the ever-changing world. That's where the magic happens!

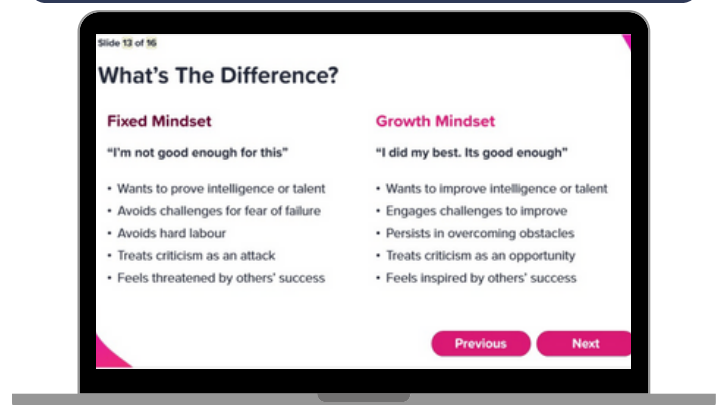

First, you "Learn" something new, like coding, a foreign language, or a cool science fact. This stretches your brain and opens up new possibilities. But as time goes by, you might discover that some of that knowledge is outdated or less useful. This is where "Unlearn" comes into play. Imagine snapping that rubber band back to its original form, letting go of what doesn't serve you anymore.

Now, here's the real trick: "Relearn." You adapt, upgrade, and replace old knowledge with new, improved knowledge. This constant cycle of learning, unlearning, and relearning is like giving your brain a turbo boost, keeping you adaptable and ahead in your career game.

Why do we need this? Well, the job market is like a fast-paced video game, with new levels and challenges popping up all the time. Embracing "Learn, Unlearn, Relearn" means you're always ready to tackle the next big boss.

So, remember, lifelong learning isn't just a school thing; it's a superpower for life. Embrace the loop, stay curious, and you'll be unstoppable in your future career. Who knows what incredible feats you'll achieve when you make "Learn, Unlearn, Relearn" your mantra? Ready, set, grow!

Upskill for the Gig Economy

In the gig economy, adaptability is key to success. Freelancers are the architects of their careers in a rapidly changing landscape. Lifelong learning seamlessly blends with this world through multi-credentialing and short courses. Multi-credentialing, gaining multiple certifications quickly, suits gig workers' need for rapid skill acquisition. Short online courses provide quick, targeted knowledge.

Imagine you're a freelance graphic designer, and there's suddenly high demand for animation. Enroll in a short animation course to swiftly expand your skill set, boosting your marketability. Lifelong learning enables gig workers to pivot, diversify, and seize emerging opportunities, fueling their success.

The gig economy thrives on "learn as you go," where each new skill or credential unlocks exciting projects and higher income. Embracing lifelong learning through multi-credentialing and short courses isn't just a strategy; it's freelancers' lifeline. It empowers them to stay competitive, relevant, and excel in this ever-evolving job landscape, making them true gig economy champions.

Short Course Platforms

Many skills can be obtained with minimal investment of money and time through online learning platforms, extremely advantageous for gig workers and lifelong learning opportunities.

Udemy: Choose from over 210,000 online video courses with new additions published every month. Purchase access to individual courses ranging in price from $20 - $200 or select a subscription for open access.

Skill Share: Select from over 25,000 classes for creative and curious people, on topics including illustration, design, photography, video, freelancing, and more. Skillshare classes are taught by industry leaders excited to share their tools, techniques, and professional journeys with you.

edX: edX was founded by Harvard and MIT as an experiment to make the world's best education available to everyone. It is online learning that delivers real professional progress across nearly every career discipline, from artificial intelligence and robotics to sustainability and public health.

Coursera: Coursera partners with more than 275 leading universities and companies to bring flexible, affordable, job-relevant online learning to individuals and organisations worldwide. Learning opportunities include hands-on projects and courses, to job-ready certificates and degree programs.
