What is the Human Rights?

Human rights are rights inherent to all human beings, regardless of race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, language, religion, or any other status.

What does it mean?

No one shall torture and hurt you in an unhuman or cruel manner. In particular, no one shall be scientific experimentation on you without his/her free consent.

What does it look like?

The right to life and liberty, freedom from slavery and torture, freedom of opinion and expression, the right to work and education, and many more.

What would it feel like?

They are about being treated fairly, treating others fairly and having the ability to make genuine choices in our daily lives.

Why is it important?

They recognise our freedom to make choices about our lives and to develop our potential as human beings.

Where do we see these issues in our community/world?

Foreign governments known to practice torture are South Africa, Egypt, Jordan, Morocco, and Afghanistan.
