Job Spotlight

How to become a Veterinary Nurse

What do Vet Nurses do?

Vet Nurses support Veterinarians by providing medical care to any animals that come into the clinic. The job involves undertaking a range of diagnostic tests, medical treatments and even some minor surgical procedures (under veterinary instruction), as well as educating and supporting owners on maintaining the health of their pets.

How to become a Vet Nurse in Australia

A Certificate IV in Veterinary Nursing is the basic qualification required for eligibility to work as a Vet Nurse, this usually takes 2 years to complete.

Step 1 – Study English, Mathematics and Biology at high school. Completing Year 12 in these subjects could help you to be more competitive when applying for jobs.

Step 2 – Complete relevant tertiary qualifications e.g.:

Diploma of Veterinary Nursing

An Apprenticeship or Traineeship would allow you to learn and gain work experience at the same time.

Step 3 – Once you have completed your studies it's compulsory in WA to register with the Western Australia Vet Surgeons Board and recommended in other states to register with AVNAT.

Step 4 – Consider specialising or upskilling with other tertiary qualifications and short courses to progress your career. You could go to uni and complete a Bachelor of Veterinary Science, qualify, register and work as a Veterinarian.
