

Career as a Business Site Manager

The Good Careers Guide states that building site managers supervise the work carried out on construction sites. Some building site managers are self-employed as contractors or consultants to larger building companies.

A building site manager may perform the following tasks:

- Provide skilled assistance to builders in planning and organising building projects by interpreting and carrying out their directions.
- Interpret building plans, regulations and codes of practice in order to direct the progress of work and monitor compliance with construction documents.
- Calculate costs and estimate completion times to prepare tender bids and deal with contract variations.
- Arrange supply of materials and equipment.
- Draw up detailed programs for site works and the coordination of building workers, and record variations from design drawings or specifications.
- Negotiate with subcontractors and make reports for builders and architects.

Site managers usually have a tertiary qualification in building and/or construction management.

What is a Circular Economy?

Wikipedia states that a Circular Economy is a model of resource production and consumption in any economy that involves sharing, leasing, reusing, repairing, refurbishing. With sustainability central to the circular economy, the focus is on transforming our economy into one that is renewing; an economy that innovates to pro-actively reduce the impact of industries' waste on the environment prior to it happening, rather than waiting to address the consequences of these issues.
