

HEART

at the heart of the whole of life

May we be open to you that we might love with a heart that warmly welcomes all who seek safety and shelter on Australian shores that invites in those who have been pushed to the outside of families, friendship groups and communities that reaches out to those who have not yet found a place of belonging and acceptance that encourages and enables those who are fearful and unsure of themselves that comforts and cares for those who are distressed and for whom life offers much challenge and struggle that restores relationships where they have been damaged and discarded that stands with those who are treated unjustly and speaks up for those whose voice is not able to be heard

that shares from its substance not just its surplus and gives of its bread, not of its crumbs that cares for and connects with creatures and the cosmos that seeks to live simply, in ways that sustain and support

that listens and learns not just for the sake of self but for the building of a fair and just world that is filled with passion for the possible and a deep commitment to peace that is creative, hope-filled and hopeful that sees and celebrates the beauty, goodness and gift in each other, in nature and in self

that we might love with your HEART.*

Celebrating

The Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

That you will go into the heart of God and find the heart of the world.
That you will go into the world and find the heart of God.

Jan L Richardson

Nano's generous love and compassion for the poor was born out of her sense of being loved in her own life, by her family and by God. She shared this love and compassion with the world in very practical ways - by establishing schools for children otherwise excluded from education and society, and by tending to the everyday needs of those who were sick, elderly and on the margins.

Nano drew strength from her prayerful devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. In Jesus, Nano experienced the human face and heart of God's compassion, and sought to share this love and compassion with others. She named her religious congregation The Sisters of Charitable Instruction of the Sacred Heart of Jesus on its establishment in 1775. In later seeking approval from Rome, the congregation changed its name to the Presentation Sisters of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Blessing

That the desires of your heart may draw you toward creation and connection.
That community and kindred will attend your path.
That you will not go alone.
