The power of parent knowledge for learning

CSPV invite you to register for our Connect Webinar for parents with guest presenter Dr Debbie Pushor.

Wednesday 21st October 2020 7.00pm-8.00pm

Sharing your parent knowledge – how to develop a partnership with teachers to support your child to thrive.

Do you ever feel hesitant to share information about your child with their teacher or to raise any questions about their learning?

The experiences of remote learning have demonstrated perhaps how little you really know about what your children are learning at school and how little teachers know about your family that could enhance their learning.

What we will explore:

In conversation with University Professor, author, speaker and researcher, Dr Debbie Pushor, we will explore parent knowledge and how important it is to share knowledge of your child to build teacher knowledge and enable parent engagement in learning. Debbie is passionate about parent knowledge and much of her research and work is centred on parents and teachers walking alongside each other to support children to thrive.

Who is this for?

Parents and carers, this is your opportunity to build your confidence to share your knowledge with your child's teachers. What they are struggling with, what they love, their passions and interests. When teachers truly know your child, they are able to support them and understand how to engage you in your child's learning and create a partnership for children to thrive.
