Career as a Financial Planner

The Good Universities Guide states that financial planners develop and implement financial plans for individuals covering all areas of finance, including taxation, retirement, superannuation, insurance and estate planning. Financial planning is a discipline on its own – one does not have to be an accountant to be a financial planner. There are number courses offered at universities in business, commerce, finance, economics and it is important to also note that should students wish to become a financial planner, the course they choose must be accredited by ASIC (Australian Securities and Investment Commission) or they may not be eligible to provide financial advice.

Useful information can be found on the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) website.
