

University Music Studies: Ask Us Anything

About this event

University Music Studies: Ask Us Anything is a free and fully-online event, designed for music students in Years 10-12 wanting to learn more about what tertiary music study involves – in a relaxed, comfortable setting.

Through this event, attendees will have the opportunity to connect with current and former music students of the Melbourne Conservatorium of Music (The University of Melbourne), and discuss:

- the structure of a music degree (for example, what kinds of lectures, tutorials and other classes you can expect in a music-university lifestyle).
- the study/rehearsal expectations in a music degree, and how this differs to other degrees due to the nature of practicing an instrument, composing a new work etc.
- navigating the social environment of tertiary music study.
- involving yourself in extra-curricular musical activities that can benefit your coursework, and how to best manage these.
- most importantly, answer any questions that prospective students have about tertiary music study!

Project Coordinator

The founder and coordinator of University Music Studies: Ask Us Anything is Georgina Palmer. If you have any questions regarding this project, please contact palmergc@student.unimelb.edu.au.
