March 8 2024 is International Women's Day

International Women's Day (IWD) provides a key moment to celebrate the achievements of women in the workplace and shine a light on the employers supporting them.

Increasingly, organisations worldwide provide progressive policies, practices, benefits and support mechanisms so women's careers can thrive - and these workplaces offer appealing job opportunities. Plus, celebrating the work of women inspires further women to achieve their full potential.

Prime Employers for Women must continuously meet 10 criteria to maintain a deep focus on Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) all year round.

Where Women Work is a female-focused careers platform and an International Women's Day collaboration, showcasing Prime Employers for Women. While it's UK based, many companies are international, so offer Australian women like you, inspiring career opportunities.

Check it out to see who makes their top 50 list!

What is the Gender Pay Gap?

What is the Gender Pay Gap?

The gender pay gap is a widely used, internationally recognised measure for gender equality that shows the difference between what men and women get paid.

The Workplace Gender Equality Agency (WGEA) is an Australian Government statutory agency to promote and improve workplace gender equality. For the first time, it has published the gender pay gaps for nearly 5,000 Australian employers, to speed up progress to close the gender pay gap.

You can visit the WGEA News Room to learn more about what's being done to close the gender pay gap, and view interactive statistics and infographics using the WGEA Data Explorer.

What are the statistics?

The results show that of median gender pay gaps:

- 30% of employers have a gap between the target range of -5% and +5%.
- 62% over 5% and in favour of men.
- 8% are less than -5% and in favour of women.
- 50% of all included employers have a gap of over 9.1%.

The Future Health Leaders Program is designed to inspire female high school students to enter a career in health and medical research, innovation and life sciences.

The Program brings together a group of twelve young women, chosen from around Australia, for a single day session at Australian National University in Canberra to:

- Showcase the diversity of career pathways across health and medical research with a focus on engaging with female leaders in their respective fields.

- Inspire a passion in entering a career in health and medical research.
- Create connections and opportunities to engage beyond the single session with several virtual sessions, mentoring participants on topics relevant to their future studies.

The program is now open for applications from Australian students in Year 11 who identify as female. Applications will be open until 5 April 2024, with the day in Canberra scheduled for Term 3 (exact date to be confirmed).
