Promotional resources

Introduction

The Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) has up to 100,000 paid temporary jobs available to help deliver the next federal election.

There is a range of jobs, and no election experience is required. Jobs are available all around Australia, in metro, regional, rural and remote areas. Most jobs are on voting day and some are in the weeks before and after.

We only have a short period of time to employ our workforce, and we're asking for your help to spread the word about the opportunities.

In this kit you'll find resources to let people know about the temporary jobs working at the election.

For more information visit aec.gov.au/electionjobs or contact us at electionjobs@aec.gov.au

Workforce diversity

The AEC strives to have a workforce that reflects and supports the diverse community we serve.

We encourage people from all backgrounds and locations to join our team, including First Nations peoples, people with disability and people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds.

Political neutrality

The Australian Electoral Commission's role is to deliver the election with the highest levels of integrity and impartiality. This requires the AEC and its staff, including temporary workers, to be politically neutral. This means being, and being seen to be, neutral in relation to political parties, political candidates, and their policies.

Paid temporary jobs at the federal election

The Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) has up to 100,000 paid temporary jobs available at the next federal election.

More than 9 in 10 previous temporary staff say they'd recommend the work to others – and that they'd do it again. Why not join them?

There is a range of different roles from entry-level to senior positions in metro, regional and remote areas. It doesn't matter if you haven't worked at an election before. You'll get paid to train and on-the-job support.

Most jobs are on voting day, but some roles are for several weeks before or after, making it a great opportunity to earn extra money. You'll also be contributing to your community and working as part of a team.

Many of the people who worked on the last major event, the referendum, enjoyed the experience:

'It was an AMAZING team environment where I worked and a great vibe.'

'An opportunity to connect with people in my community, some of whom I hadn't seen in decades.'

'I was thrilled with my staff. Most had never worked in an election before however they were keen and happy to do any task asked of them.'

As the AEC's role is to deliver the election with the highest levels of integrity and impartiality, you must be and be seen to be, politically neutral.

The AEC strives to have a workforce that reflects and supports the diverse community we serve. We encourage people from all backgrounds and locations to join our team, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, people with disability and people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds.

Tell your friends and family about this work opportunity too.
