Selection Folios for Creative Courses

What's involved?

The most important thing is to understand the requirements - if a folio asks for 6 photographs, don't submit 10 drawings! Selection officers won't consider applications outside of the task parameters. Ensure you complete any written task components to provide purpose and context and to explain the meaning behind your work.

What should I include?

Your folio doesn't need to contain masterpieces, rather selection officers want to see a process that reflects your imagination, curiosity, inspirations and passions. Your folio should be a true reflection of you and your artistic journey.

Do I need a folio?

Many VET and university creative courses use selection folios instead of, or as well as, the ATAR. Ensure you read entry requirements carefully, as you won't be considered if a folio is compulsory and you don't submit one. If a folio submission is optional, remember that it may be used to adjust your rank and increase your chance of being selected which makes it worthwhile?

When should I start?

Look on course websites at this year's selection task requirements to get an idea of what your folio should contain. Starting now means you can capture your creative process, which is what selection officers look for. It will also save you the stress of putting it together just before the deadlines which usually coincide with exams. Application deadlines are final and institutions do not make exceptions to cut off times.

Bachelor of Arts Vs. Bachelor of Fine Arts

Some people get them confused, (and it's easy to see why), but there is a big difference between a Bachelor of Arts and a Bachelor of Fine Arts!

While you can study art-related subjects in a Bachelor of Arts, the title refers to the 'liberal arts' - 'liberal' meaning broad, and 'arts' meaning a learned skill.

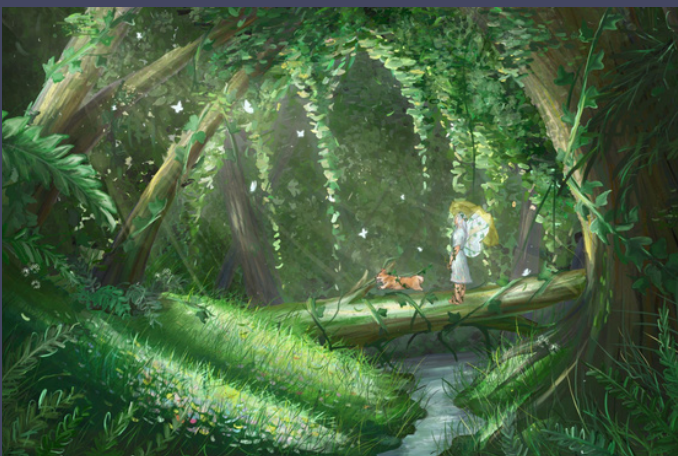

There are literally dozens of subjects to choose from within Bachelor of Arts degrees, but they are academic Humanities and Social Sciences subjects such as Languages, Anthropology, Criminology, Literature, Economics, Creative Writing, History, Media, Philosophy, Politics, Psychology, and Sociology.

In a Bachelor of Fine Arts, you can specialise in creative and practical subjects like Acting, Dance, Film and Television, Music Theatre, Production, Screenwriting, Theatre, Visual Art and more.

JMC Canvas Art Award

If you've got a knack with creative mediums, you could win a Wacom One Creative Pen Display by interpreting JMC's brief into an illustrated scene. Check the entry details and get yours in by Sunday 14th May 2023.
