

Red Pandas

By Oscar

The introduction

- Red pandas are little animals that live in bamboo forests or China. And are apart of the racoon family . There scientific name is Ailurus Fulgens.

Diet

- Red Pandas will eat roots, succulents, grasses, fruits, insects, grubs, and occasionally will kill and eat birds or small mammals and bamboo

Habitat

- Red Pandas live in high-altitude, Temperate forests with bamboo. And understories in the Himalayas and other high mountains. They range from Northern Myanmar (Burma) to west Sichuan. And Yunnan provinces of China.

Predators

- Red Pandas only have a couple predators which are Snow Leopards occasionally Martens. But Red Panda cubs could be hunted by Birds and other small carnivores.

Appearance

- Red Pandas have large round heads with a short snout and big pointed ears. Their faces are white with a reddish brown tear mark that extend from the eyes to the corner of their mouth.

Adaptations

- Red Pandas are skilled climbers using the trees for a shelter to escape from predators and to sunbathe in the winter.

Life span

- Red Pandas live as long as 23 years they show symptoms of around the age at around 12 – 14 years old cubs are born after around 135.

